

WORKSHOP OFFERING

PROJECT MANAGEMENT FOR NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

Though the concept of Project Management has its origins in the for-profit world and though it had a revolutionary effect in the management style of many businesses, project management is being used in nonprofit organizations. Though the purpose, the focus, and the level of sophistication might be very different between the two organizational settings, the fundamental steps or stages to project management apply to both types of organizations. Nonprofit managers need to know the theory behind this management style in order to get the most effective results for its use.

In this seminar, the participants will learn:

- A brief historical footnote as to the original motivation for project management.
- The four stages to project management.
- The critical nuances for nonprofit project management.
- How to apply the four stages of project management to a back-home project
- Useful tools to use in implementing project management
- The success factors for project management results.
- Possible pitfalls to achieving project management success
